"There are other programs out there that do offer better terms or lower rates, but they're scattered throughout the community and dispersed," Schelin said. "This is one organization that's been very aggressive in saving applicants' money. We want to provide the best program in the market, the best service." For now, Schelin said, the savings are simply being passed on to customers. "We offer a lower rate than the other lenders," he said. "We manage to get it through our costs." To find out more about the program, go to www.GreatSmoke.org.During the ceremony, Medical Association President Dr. Samouni and the members of the Association’s Council thanked the President and Mofa’s many distinguished guests for their presence and commended them for their ongoing support of the Association. The event also marked the announcement
