Exchange Database files are used to restore a Windows system after a hardware failure or a failed system installation. The Exchange Management Console (EMC) is used to restore a previously backed-up database file that is available in the same location as the primary Exchange server. The Exchange Management Console is also used to export database files from a backup device into a backup file. The database file stores information about the email messages, contacts, calendars, journals, and notes stored on an Exchange system, such as the subject, sender, recipients, and the body of the messages. Once you backup the database file, you need to restore it on a new system so that you can access all of your data and functions, including email, contacts, calendar, and journals.

Server BKF.Q: How to use a range of numbers (1-6) to collect full word? I'm trying to get for example a range of numbers (1-6) to collect the full word from a list. For example: Q1) What kind of car do you drive? [1] a) a car [2] b) an old car [3] c) a plastic car [4] d) new car [5] e) old car Please note that all the possible answers have to be collected from the list. In my actual data I have a lot more questions than just cars, so I can not predefine a range of number to be used. I have tried something like this: `filter(Questionnaire_data, type.x=='car')` However, it gives me only the first answer which is 'a'. Any ideas? A: You can use the option to return all possible answers from the list in mutate: `library(dplyr) questionnaire_data %>% mutate(type = as.character(type.x)) %>% ungroup() %>% mutate(type = as.character(type.x)) %>% group_by(type) %>% summarize(answer = paste(type, collapse = ";"))` 09e8f5149f
