Bears Interested In Trading For Eagles QB Maybe this is a sign that the Eagles are getting tired of being able to pick and choose at will from the last 2 drafts (S Ellington, DJ Foster, Josh Huff). But now they may have a serious problem at quarterback with injury - the Eagles are currently dealing with multiple injuries that make their future at QB uncertain. The list includes: - QB Foles, who has been out since Week 1 - QB Wentz, who is currently on the IR list because of a fractured back, likely a few weeks for him - QB Barkley, who is injured but could make a return in the next few weeks - QB Wentz, who missed the final 6 games and received little to no playing time during the season. He missed the preseason with a back injury. The situation for the Eagles is without question. If they want to keep Barkley, they need to start Week 1. The only option is acquiring a high drafted rookie, which they haven't done in awhile. Their best chance would be to trade for a QB like Cincinnati's Andy Dalton. They have a need at wide receiver and are giving up only one pick for their current QB in Foles. There are just so many good options for the Bears to swipe up the Eagles 2015 1st Round pick to get Barkley or Wentz. Would they trade that pick for Dalton or Wilson? I like the idea of trading down from the 8th or 9th overall spot to draft a young QB in the late 1st or early 2nd round. As for Wentz, it has to be said his injuries became worse than the Eagles had anticipated when they drafted him #2 overall in the 2016 draft. 2 back surgeries in as many years and the Eagles may have to consider cutting him loose. Foles is the leader in terms of how they view the QB position and how they keep it going. He is signed until June 2021 (Foles will be 33 in June). Foles is currently practicing and has been cleared to return. The Eagles said the team would not rush him back into the starting lineup. If they keep him, he becomes the most expensive backup in NFL history. His new contract is for $10.5 million with $500K in guaranteed money in base salary. The Eagles could choose to put Foles on the roster-injured reserve and opt to pay him the rest of the base salaries ($10.5 million), or

‘God of Astronomy’: Jim Carruthers: The Moab Story Jim Carruthers, the former president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Commission on Clergy, Young Men and Scouting, and author of "The Moab Story," gives a 45-minute talk on the Book of Mormon using the story of Moab to illustrate its historical accuracy and that of the Book of Mormon as we know it today. Members of the LDS Church met in general conference in April 2016, and Elder D. Todd Christofferson, now President Russell M. Nelson's counselor in the First Presidency, provided a moving and inspiring talk to the gathered brethren. The call of President Nelson to found the Joseph Smith Historic Sites Foundation came as a surprise. Prior to President Nelson's call to start this new foundation, organization efforts were lacking. Not only would the need for such an organization, but also the strategies for operating and maintaining a network of sites seem daunting. What would be the scope of involvement? How could public private partnerships be made? Would the church be able to shoulder the financial load? On April 11, 2016, at the LDS Church's general conference, President Russell M. Nelson announced the Joseph Smith Historic Sites Foundation to the conference. This was an announcement of significant and unprecedented scope. The Foundation was not a top priority of the general presidency and was not a single piece of unfinished business. In contrast, it was the driving effort of President Nelson's presidency. In his address, the 18th President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints shared President Nelson's call to "Follow the prophet's teachings to visit the sacred burial sites of the early Church, and share these sacred treasures of the restored gospel." (Ensign, April 2016) In the days immediately following the announcement, there was a rush to name institutions and organizations to establish this foundation. However, the president's announcement was far more than the naming of an organization. It was the call to action for each one of us who hold a stake or ward in his church. President Nelson laid out a gospel-centered foundation for the organization. "We are also living in an age when faith and facts must work together to advance the gospel of Jesus Christ. In addressing the site preservation process, we must also take into account the depth and breadth of the scientific evidence that has been uncovered by arche
