recorded and combined 2 audio clips. One is an mp3 of a voice, and the other is a clipping of my phone's ring tone. I combined them in Audacity, and then used the Amplify effect to reach the desired volume. However, there appears to be nearly an extra 2 seconds on the resultant mp3. Is that normal? Basically, your "phone" clip is going to get a little louder as Audacity adds in more and more audio from your ringtone. This leads to a higher sample rate. When Audacity uses the high sample rate to rebuild the file, it has to first pull back all of the audio that is outside of the sample rate that it was originally (too high sample rate) and then c9d1549cdd
