Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a recording medium having record areas, a write-once optical recording method and a write-once optical recording apparatus used for the write-once optical recording method. 2. Description of the Related Art There has been developed a system of write-once type in which a record mark is formed on a recording medium by a laser beam to be recorded on an area of the recording medium, in a record area of the recording medium, the recording area being formed by means of a track, a sector, a band or the like to be separated, which is selected based on a recording layer, and the record mark is recorded within the area of the recording medium. On the other hand, in the case of an optical disk system having the optical disk formed by a transparent substrate such as a plastic substrate or the like to which information is optically written by an optical head, the optical head is caused to focus on the optical disk to write a record mark on the optical disk, to thereby record information. The record mark formed on the recording medium with a laser beam, is detected by a read head to read the information. Therefore, the optical disk is a rewritable optical disk. On the other hand, in order to realize such an optical disk having a large capacity, there has been adopted a multi-layer structure for increasing the thickness of the substrate of the optical disk to obtain a large capacity of information. In this case, the arrangement of the multi-layer structure has been changed depending on the type of the substrate, for the reason that the characteristics of information is changed depending on the substrate. Therefore, by providing a record area in the optical disk, it has been effectively to write a record mark on the optical disk having the multi-layer structure, depending on the type of the substrate. On the other hand, in the case of the write-once optical disk, there has not been provided any system which distinguishes the optical disk having
