"When I first played with the programme it felt as if I was using a very sophisticated piece of kit. "Instead of a set of rules and using a piece of software to implement them, "we are born with a potential to play. "I was initially shocked. It is my first time doing anything like that." Eduardo Navarro, Pablo Dominguez, Francisco De La Luna, Santiago Soler "I am a member of Associación del Club del Puertorichero, a chess coach who is a professor at the University of Seville, and a coauthor of my children's book. "My motivations for developing this software are based on the following: " - The ability to make the use of computers and software easy for the user. " -Giving space to the user to express him or herself. " - The opportunity to do manual labour in less time than it takes to get someone to do it for you. "I hope that it can be used in a variety of different scenarios. "The Open Source .Characterisation of an extracellular citrate synthase

(CS) from the isoprenoidaccumulating alga Crypthecodinium cohnii. Citrate synthase (CS) catalyses the formation of citric acid from oxaloacetate and acetylcoenzyme A (acetyl-CoA) via a condensation reaction. Due to its central role in the tricarboxylic acid cycle (TCA cycle), CS is a key enzyme of intermediary metabolism. In addition, it has the potential to be applied in biotechnology. Here, we describe the cloning of a CS from the isoprenoid-accumulating alga Crypthecodinium cohnii (CoCr CS) and its expression and biochemical characterisation. CoCr CS is a cytoplasmic protein, and is only active in the presence of divalent ions, such as Mg(2+) or Mn(2+), via the citrate lyase complex. CoCr CS is able to synthesise citric acid in vitro from acetyl-CoA and oxaloacetate, and is inactivated by sulfhydryl reagents. Based on its properties, CoCr CS is likely to be an aspartate-type CS. A significantly reduced CoCr CS activity was observed in the mutant strain of C. cohn
