Empires [RTS] -Arks of the Covenant -.Q: Why aren't my community wiki answers considered community-wiki? I know that adding a chat tag to your question seems like a not-nice thing to do. But, I don't know why this happens. A: Community Wiki is a special type of answer which can be seen as a cheep way of supplying a bunch of information, while still allowing the author to earn reputation. For more details see the StackOverflow FAQ: Q: What is "Community Wiki"? A: If you're not sure, don't. The Wikipedia article on community wiki gives a nice description of the concept: In academia, community wiki is a designation for answers created by anyone, regardless of reputation, on any community wiki question or answer that are deemed wiki-friendly. So I guess the idea is that if the contribution is totally gratuitous, or just adds no value, then it should be very easy for a user to mark it as community wiki, to indicate that the content is not supposed to stand on its own. Perry Rudnicki Perry Rudnicki (born November 16, 1958 in Plock, Poland) is a Polish American journalist, author, and radio host, best known for his 2005 book, The Way: How the Catholic Church Built a Perfect Church and Turned Water into Wine. Early life Rudnicki was born in Poland and lived in the village of Błogoszcz, where his father was a teacher and the church was open every day of the year, as the village had no church of its own. In his early 20s, Rudnicki worked as a journalist, editor, and columnist at Krakowski Jazyk. Radio and journalism Rudnicki moved to the United States in 1982 and became a U.S. citizen in 1987. He worked for KLOE 1340AM in Austin, Texas in the '80s, as well as WJMN, a talk radio show on which he and other guests debated a variety of topics. On March 26, 2007, Rudnicki's show, "The Perry Rudnicki Show", was launched on AM 830 The Answer in Chicago.
