What's new in Elden Ring:

2007-12-29T00:00:00ZOhio State suffered its biggest regular season loss in program history to rival Michigan in 2013, losing on the road, 63-37. Two years later, coach Urban Meyer was put in a tough position. A win over Michigan would have kept Ohio State in the playoff conversation. But the Buckeyes lost, 31-27, and instead of being a near-lock for the final four, the program's uncertainty only grew. Meyer was asked about his concerns the following Monday. The playoffs, he told reporters, "are a killer." Meyer went through the remaining seven games in which the Buckeyes were undefeated, and no other program has done that to Ohio State since the NCAA Division I playoff expanded in 2014. With wins over Michigan State (that last-second muffed punt), Penn State, and USC, the Buckeyes re-entered their season as one of the four favorite final four contenders. "I thought maybe I had a firm grip on it," Meyer said. "'Oh, I know what I need to fix.'" And the answer was clear, both on the field and in the locker room. "But then we lost," Meyer said. "So I'm not thinking about that anymore." Meyer—who boldly predicted in December he would take the program to another level in 2014—embraced mediocrity as the program's new philosophy. "The days of us reaching for that fourth, fifth or sixth perfect game are over," Meyer said. "The days of us reaching for a fourth, fifth or sixth perfect season are over. That included a 41-24 win over Penn State in the regular-season finale, a game that kept the program on top of the Big Ten's bowl pecking order despite the loss. The Big Ten was a mess, and while the league produced solid teams at the top, the bottom
