The glycosylation pattern of IgA1 and IgA2 present in the serum of 112 patients allergic to seafood, i.e. after fish ingestion, was determined by competitive enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay. The serum concentrations of IgA1 and IgA2 were very similar; however, the specific reactivity of IgA2 towards soy bean and grass pollen allergens was decreased. IgA glycosylation was similar to that observed in patients with other atopic diseases, i.e. IgA1-N-glycosylation was less common in patients with fish allergy than in allergic patients with other allergies. IgA2 was N-glycosylated more often than IgA1. The IgG glycosylation in the serum of allergy patients was also different: IgG1-Fc-glycosylation was more frequent than IgG2-Fc-glycosylation.
