“HyperMotion™ unlocks the full potential of FIFA 22,” said Lars Jalland, Senior Producer on FIFA Ultimate Team. “We’re introducing the most powerful data-driven gameplay features to date, and we’ve used motion capture technology to create an authentic, lifelike experience, delivering on our promise of the most realistic game in the franchise.” Gameplay improvements include a greater degree of player intelligence, as well as tighter controls that allow players to perform a variety of offensive and defensive actions with greater agility and balance. Also making their debut are X-rated celebrations, playable female and male players, and all-new crowd chants. Game Improvements “We all felt at FIFA 17, when the development team had to cut performance and cut features,” said Craig Elliott, Senior Producer on FIFA Ultimate Team. “So when we asked whether or not we could scale back the features a little but still deliver the fun and excitement of FIFA Ultimate Team, we were all very proud and excited to get approval from the development team. We really want to make FIFA Ultimate Team our most accessible and feature-rich product in the history of the series, and this year will be no exception.” Along with a host of key new gameplay features, players can also now dive to tackle – including the ability to roll-up or guillotine down through the ball – and anticipatory footwork in open play. This applies to players playing in controlled and free-play modes. “There are areas where the execution of the usual ‘short pass’ mechanic could have been sharper,” said Ben Wilson, Director of Live Services. “There’s a great range of technical improvements, and while we have made changes, we’ve also put in a ton of effort to improve players’ abilities and make it feel more realistic and responsive.” Unprecedented player intelligence will ensure that players are able to anticipate and react appropriately to their opponent’s movements, as well as react to off-ball cues (like a misplaced pass, or a defender’s movement) to create chances. “What we’re aiming to do is to put players in situations where they need to react intuitively and make the right decision,” said David Rutter, Gameplay Lead. “We’re using a
