Van Dijck was in Flanders originally, and later spread to the Netherlands. People with this surname include: A.P. van Dijck (1908–1942), Dutch communist activist and politician Arnold van Dijck (born 1936), Belgian chess player Danny van Dijck (born 1995), Dutch racing cyclist Eric van Dijck (born 1994), Belgian swimmer Frans van Dijck (born 1940), Dutch artist, designer, and architect Harmen van Dijck (born 1957), Dutch cyclist Marjan van Dijck (born 1962), Dutch actress Oscar van Dijck (born 1986), Belgian footballer Ritske van Dijck (born 1975), Belgian sprinter See also Van Dijck baronets References Category:Dutch-language surnames Category:Toponymic surnames Proteomic analysis of human melanoma in comparison to normal skin and benign nevi. An improved understanding of human melanoma genetics will contribute to the development of novel therapies. The identification and quantification of potential biomarkers of the different biologic stages of melanoma will facilitate the development of new specific molecular therapies for melanoma. In the present study, we analyzed the proteins present in human melanoma samples compared to normal skin and benign nevi samples, for the purpose of identifying potential biomarkers in melanoma. Differential protein expression was analyzed by 2-dimensional gel electrophoresis (2DE) and matrix-assisted laser desorption ionization-time of flight (MALDI-TOF) mass spectrometry. A total of 90 differentially expressed proteins were identified. A significant portion of these proteins are involved in
