Free download pdf highway code[Effects of microstructure and composition of oral mucous membrane on wear of denture base materials]. In the field of denture base materials, baseplate resins containing acrylic resin are recently developed for better hardness and wear resistance. Furthermore, recently, in the light of modern dentistry, natural teeth and gingiva are using as abutment teeth and gingiva are using as abutment teeth of denture bases. Therefore, studies on the biocompatibility of baseplate resin and the mechanical properties of the oral mucous membrane have become more important. The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of hardening method, microstructure and composition of oral mucous membrane on the wear of baseplate resin.

Resin specimens were made from one commercially available baseplate resin and four of laboratory soft acrylic resins. We cut two-way tooth form specimens of each resin to a size of approximately 6 x 2 x 1 mm. We immersed the prepared specimens in artificial saliva at 37 degrees C for 24 h. The specimens were polished with a cellulose acetate film under a pressure of 10 kg/cm<sup>2</sup>. We polished the specimens with a cloth at a speed of 2000 times/min. They were immersed in artificial saliva again for 24 h. Then we measured the weight loss of each specimen. After the specimens were dried in a desiccator for 24 h, we measured the wear amount of each specimen. We analyzed the data using two-way analysis of variance and t-test.

We found no significant differences among the groups in wear amounts. However, the mean weight loss of Group IB (AI baseplate resin) was smaller than those of other groups. These results suggest that the use of the baseplate resin and its abutment tooth make close contact will cause more wear of denture bases.
