"It was a lot of fun," Bennett told Pro Football Talk. "We were a group and had a good time. I went out with some friends, and we went to check out the Detroit thing. But a lot of guys were with us. We started to get cold, so we went home to get warm. "During the game I got a little headache, and it got worse. At some point my mom had to come pick me up. The game was canceled, so I took my mom home. We had the whole party on Sunday at the house. It was a lot of fun. Everyone was there. I had a good time." Bennett isn't the only Dez to get decked out for his birthday. Last week the team adopted a goat to add to the festivities. On Wednesday, they also revealed a special billboard for his birthday. It has a picture of Bennett behind a large birthday cake. The billboard was located at approximately Park and 36th Street in downtown Detroit. Nucleation, growth, morphology, and crystalline material properties of Au nanocrystals: a combined experimental and density functional theory study. The nucleation and growth of gold nanocrystals (Au NCs) on silicon (Si) and silicon carbide (SiC) substrates has been studied using a combined experimental and density functional theory (DFT) study. Experimental results showed that Au NCs undergo polyol-mediated nucleation on Si and SiC, and the nucleation efficiency, which is defined as the fraction of all formed Au NCs that are nucleated on Si or SiC, decreases with the annealing temperature. Au NCs nucleate on the Si and SiC surfaces when the annealing temperature is lower than 200 °C, whereas the crystallinity of the Au NCs is lowered when the annealing temperature is greater than 400 °C. Fourier-transform infrared spectroscopy and X-ray photoelectron spectroscopy investigations verified that the formation of the isolated and crystalline Au NCs is realized as a result of the reduction of metal cations at the SiO₂-Si and SiO₂-SiC interface. More interestingly, the interfacial interaction between the avengersQ: How do I use Shaders to change the brightness of an image and also save the results How do I use shaders to change the brightness of an image, and then also save the results? I'm using render to texture and not using lightmapped for my image, although I'm open to the answers for that as well. Thanks! A: Make sure you're setting your "sources" for your image. As far as saving the results, I think that you can save the texture you return from the shader, but it won't have anything to do with the image source you're shaded for. So, if you're working with a monochrome image, you could save the brightness of the image using a texture value. But, you probably don't want to save the original image source color itself, so the best solution would be to save a new texture using the blending mode you're using for the image. I think I'd use alpha, because in Blender, it can be relative to the transparency of your image, so it won't affect the brightness of the image. In the shader, I'd set your "sources" for the image to be the output of your vertex shader, and then you'd just have your "out" set to a rendered texture. You can just set that to be your blending mode, although the blend factor would be hard to control (unless you made it a float). Then, you could just have a "sources" for your image to be the output of your vertex shader, which in this case, should be completely transparent. And then, your "out" would just be another texture, this time you'd set the blending mode to be the source image you want to be blended with. You could make "sources" of various kinds of images (bloom, etc) and this should let you make lighting changes to them that won't be lost. I don't really understand what you mean about "not using lightmaps", so I'm not sure what you're expecting to do, but I hope this helps you out a bit. You could also go into Properties>Material>Shadow,
