The Renaissance of Planned Parenthood With the airing of undercover videos showing Planned Parenthood executives haggling for the sale of fetal body parts, it looks like the months of debate over defunding the nation's largest abortion provider was warranted. The "babies" in question are brought to America at the point of birth and must make their way to one of the nation's 10,000-plus abortion clinics for the severing of their arms and legs. This is not some fictional horror film in which evil commandos unearth a secret map revealing the location of Planned Parenthood's "baby factory." It is reality, and Planned Parenthood is thriving thanks to billions of taxpayer dollars. 1 of 9 Planned Parenthood's lackluster response to these revelations suggests that the organization has little concern for the lives of millions of unborn children who die at the hands of its abortion business. What's more, Planned Parenthood leaders have already indicated that they will continue on with business as usual with the fresh influx of funds. This is due to abortion being legal in the United States up until the moment of birth. The legalities aside, abortion has a dark side, and the features of what's witnessed in the videos are not unfamiliar to the abortion industry. For example, using fetal remains from abortions for organ harvesting, and selling them for big bucks. Not only is the fetal body part babyish, but some parts are reportedly sold in a charred or maggot-infested state. As the cult of abortion grows by leaps and bounds, Planned Parenthood sees a strategic advantage in accepting the thousands of checks that flood into its coffers. In addition to being a business opportunity, abortion is also a lucrative enterprise for Planned Parenthood. In fact, the women's health-care provider made nearly $300 million in 2010, according to The New York Times. With the unfolding publicity, Planned Parenthood has every reason to be optimistic. There will be no shortage of funding going forward. The videos will generate greater visibility for the organization, which will provide further opportunities for fundraising. And with the viewership of the undercover videos hitting an all-time high, perhaps more Americans will be fed up with the abortion industry and will want to know just how much they are paying for the death of their children. I have spent the last five years at E3 the video game industry's biggest annual trade show. I have

What's New In?

"It's a truism of basketball: If you're not playing defense, you're not having a good game. Same thing goes for a pitcher. And this year, so many pitchers are not playing defense it's almost impossible to win without defense," said Randy Levine, the president of the players' union. "Take a look at the numbers. The AL and NL are combining for 1.17 Wins Above Replacement." For a hitter, that means 1.17 extra wins. For a pitcher, it means 1.17 extra games won. It's not hyperbole: Revere probably won as many games as the Twins' leading slugger, Joe Mauer, this season. He was the Game 6 hero. Revere's stop against the Indians' Shin-Soo Choo is arguably the best defensive play in baseball this season. "In the first half this year, I was a defensive liability," Revere said. "It wasn't easy to run on me. I mean, I wasn't fast, either. But you have to trust yourself." It's been a breakthrough. After the trade to Boston, Revere played in 154 games, hit 25 home runs and stole 35 bases, but he was a sub-par defender. There's no doubt he's still not a shoo-in for Gold Glove honors, but he's improved immensely since arriving in the mid-2012. He's the best defensive center fielder in the American League, and he's been the top-rated defender at that position since the All-Star break. His defensive numbers are striking: .955 fielding percentage, a .985 fielding percentage in right field, .960 in left field and .977 in center. "Guys a couple years ago, they were talking about how ridiculous it was, but nowadays nobody's talking about it," Revere said. "It's always been normal for me. You gotta learn to play good defense and you can only take it as far as you put it in your mind. There's no such thing as a snitching ball or a soft ball. When the guy hits it, it's hit. It doesn't matter how soft it is." Just as importantly, he doesn't chase any bad pitches. There are few great catches in baseball, but you never want to see a center fielder chasing a ball that would be caught in an ideal situation. Revere is adept at getting in the way
