

6. "Jailbait" (Mona Lisa) [Larry Carlton, Michael Kamen] On the patio of the Whiskey Bar one night in 1975, a young man and his friend are listening to the sounds of Hank Williams on the jukebox. Tonight, they're talking about the girl next door. While she wouldn't be caught dead at a place like this, they know that she frequents the place. "She goes down to the Oasis pool and hangs out, and sometimes her momma lets her stay over. The other day, I went over and hid in the bushes and watched her come to the window, and she was just in her bathing suit and a pair of jean shorts and all and started running her hands through her hair. I'd never seen that kind of thing before." As the story of love and lust unfolds, a lot of the young man's fantasies are aroused-until the girl walks out of the door, just as her mother is about to come home. She has no idea that she's just taken the "ride" of a lifetime. And the boy has gone back to his regular girl. But he's going to do it again... The second time out, they're at some dark city park, just before midnight. She's there again, and they both know what's on their minds. They kiss tenderly for a while, and she pulls away. "You're some kinda nut, aren't ya?" she asks. "Well," the young man answers, "lots of people have told me that before.". No Te Duermas Amor, Mia Vivir Asi, 2010. Nos ÂiNo Te Duermas Mascaras!. In an hour-long show, we hope to have a discussion about the censorship found in The Last Jedi - the film to possibly meet with the most controversy in recent cinema history. We will be highlighting scenes from the film to the point of view of The Last Jedi spoilers as well as examine the themes of the film.]]>The show took place on an impromptu Skype call which consisted of author, novelist, radio producer, cook, yogi, and internet personality Rebecca Mendelsohn (www.rebeccamendelsohn.com), editor and co-host of Ghost In The Shell, at the invitation of MOCA Seattle to lead a discussion on censorship in The Last Jedi. We hope you'll join us for this exciting discussion about a film we feel was very carefully crafted and censored in many ways and yet still managed to polarize audiences to the point of dismissal. Two parts of the conversation will be released separately. Part 1 will be about the song cuts, music cues, and the music label cuts. Part 2 will be about the deleted scenes, the deleted dialogue, and the deleted scenes. If you would like to participate in the discussion please e-mail us at critsara@gmail.com The show took place on an impromptu Skype call which consisted of author, novelist, radio producer, cook, yogi, and internet personality Rebecca Mendelsohn (www.rebeccamendelsohn.com), editor and co-host of Ghost In The Shell, at the invitation of MOCA Seattle to lead a discussion on censorship in The Last Jedi.
