Adobe Photoshop Photoshop's audience has expanded since its debut. It's sold for almost every operating system, and is optimized for most graphic and printing formats. Newer versions include layers, animation, clustering and many more advanced features. Here is an overview of Photoshop's features:

Layers There are five layers in Photoshop. The active layer is the image that is currently being edited. The layer named "Stamp" in the background holds the image you are editing. The Layer palette is used to switch between layers. Photoshop also allows you to make layer copies, which enable you to create a blank or editable layer on top of an existing layer.

Clipboard The Clipboard acts as a repository for past selections and data that can be either copied or pasted into the image. Clipboard data is linked to a specific file and doesn't need to be stored in the file itself. Effects Effects allow you to create a variety of new effects in an image. These effects include: Alpha channel The alpha channel in an image is a transparent channel that enables you to edit an image with transparency. You can combine alpha channels to make an image look transparent. Blending modes There are three blending modes (alpha, dodge, and burn), which allow you to lighten, darken, and adjust the transparency of a specific part of an image. These blending modes are used to help remove unwanted parts of an image or to highlight a specific part of an image. Blending modes are separate for each layer in an image. The color of that layer will remain the color for that blending mode. Master layers If you want to manipulate an image without changing any of the background layers, you can easily change the master layer or use the Master layer. Spot healing Spot healing allows you to automatically correct "holes" in images, such as, for example, when you crop an image to remove the edge of the page.

Brightness/contrast This feature lets you adjust the brightness and contrast of an image.

Image adjustments There are several adjustments in Photoshop that can change the appearance of an image such as contrast, brightness, and tint.

Graphic appearance Graphic appearance properties such as type size, alignment, and shading help to determine how graphics appear in an image.

The Data Management Core will provide faculty, basic science and clinical investigators on this Program Project Grant [P01] with centralized data management, statistical, data entry and database services. It will assist all P01 investigators in the acquisition, collation and analysis of data pertaining to the project and the overall Program Project Grant application. This assistance will include routine and on-demand computing and data entry, statistical analysis and database services, physical data storage services, help in all aspects of laboratory research, consultation on experimental design, and collaboration in the preparation of annual progress reports, manuscripts, and presentations. The Core will be led by Dr. Daniel R. Goldstein who will serve as the Principal Investigator of the Core, and Dr. Elizabeth A. Heller, the Co-Principal Investigator, and Dr. William C. Chiasson, the Co-Principal Investigator on Projects 1-3 and the Co-Principal Investigator on Project 4. All of the Core's services will be directed at the individual investigators, and will be equally available to all projects and the Core Administrative Unit. The data management system will be based on a relational database schema and will be managed by an Oracle 9i environment. The database will provide for logical and efficient data entry, integration of clinical data with histologic, immunohistochemical and molecular data, storage of data in a secure location, and display and retrieval of data with appropriate statistical analysis tools. This Core will thus support all aspects of the overall program with centralized services that will help the investigators with on-going data management and analysis. Importantly, the core will centralize a large component of the program's costs. Also, the core will minimize the time and effort of the investigators.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus and method for selectively amplifying power in microwave communication systems, and more particularly, to an apparatus and method for selectively amplifying power in the upstream and downstream signals transmitted through a single antenna of a dual polarized array antenna in a dual polarized array antenna system.

2. Description of the Related Art A dual polarized array antenna system is a method of operating a dual polarized array antenna, in which a circularly polarized wave component is produced, in an operating frequency band, by combining and multiplying respective signals from the first through nth stages of a power divider which has an operation frequency of $f_1 = f_0 + (i+1)$ ($i=1$ to n). The circularly polarized wave component is then amplified by a circularly polarized low noise
