Additions Installer (VBoxGuestAdditions.exe) : Error installing VirtualBox guest Additions An unexpected error has occurred while trying to install the 'VirtualBox Guest Additions' tool. Please make sure that your computer has a recent build of VirtualBox installed. The program 'vboxguestadditions.exe' is not marked as executable. Therefore, it will not be processed There is a 'System Restore' tool available which can restore this program to its previous state. If you'd like to use this, please follow the instructions on the 'System Restore' info screen. If you didn't install VirtualBox recently (or if you want to install it again), please follow the instructions at the 'Home' page of the official VirtualBox website to uninstall it, then you can reinstall it again. More information on the error can be found in the application event log and via the command line. A: You should do this instead of opening the exe on your desktop to upgrade: Open the VBox H/W Support Tools Click the "Devices" tab Click "Attach Appliance" Select the machine you want to attach the VBox to, select the 'extend' button

How is the link set up? Can the domain be in godaddy? Is it connected to an MVC site? Are you using the Laravel PHP framework? A: Taking a little better look at the source, these lines of code: `$post = $this->collection->first(0); $this->collection->detach(); if (is_array($post)) { $post = json_encode($post); if (is_numeric($data[$array_param])) { $data[$array_param] = str_replace("$decode", "$decode", $data[$array_param]); } else { $data[$array_param] = $post; } } else { $data[$array_param] = $post; } return json_encode($data);` are causing the MVC framework to interpret those results and populate it's error messages. It's probably something in your model with your data... Q: How to
