Features Key:

Unique Skill System: During battles, your special skills (including Saber, Dark Sword, Dagger, Sorcerer Gear, Flick, etc.) are not extra equipped items but skilled abilities used in an element of battle. By increasing your rating of each skill, you can learn to use the special abilities that help you in battle.

Visceral Online Gameplay: Strive to survive against countless of monsters and other players in battle, as well as accessing the rich world in the fully online game.

Interactive Maps: Map interactive elements and experience the vast world.

Unit Alliance: Unlock powerful benefits by forming an alliance with other players. Cooperative battle is effective as it protects you from the threat of nearby monsters or other players.

Chapter System: Participating in story events, official quests, and the online world, you will be granted rewards via chapters. By accumulating these chapters, you will receive a variety of items to enhance your fighting power or gain access to powerful forces in the online world.

What's new in Elden Ring:

Because of their size, they are primarily designed for PC gamers. For those that are looking for a visual novel experience or are unsure of what that entails, you can look for more information on the PS Vita.

Tue, 26 Nov 2013 07:54:20 +0000118521 >On February 21st at 6pm PT, a secondary lag spike, not originally included in our post-release plans, will be released in the game. This is a regular, standard lag spike that's happened every time they've started uptesting since the game's release. In the first few days, some players will have to use the exact same top 10 most unpopular/underrated items, or the game may recognize this and give them small/moderate boosts. But in about a week, more people will need those same items, and the lag spike we'll always have will kick in, so the items that were used most earlier this month will slip into slightly less demand in one week, and so on. But we already have a pattern, because we want to preserve as much player activity on the servers as possible.

In addition to this change, an extra, newer item that can be used instead of the most popular/rated/underrated items will be added to the item shop. Performance bonus. Players without these items will still be able to use the game, but gameplay may shift further into standardized gear; all items are roughly equivalent, so the game doesn't care how you've earned your items. But in particular, items that are already "old" will be replaced by this new one, so if you want "old" items, you'll need to re-roll them after the new item is added on February 21st. Also, any items that were anywhere in the top 50 list will be awarded with a small boost to their AOMR by Feb 23rd.

So what does this mean for you? Make sure you use the AOMR tool at least once a week, to track your item utility, and remember that your items will likely be less useful two weeks after the item
