AND PRODUCTS - Moby Dick Products - Q&A's - [Buddha needs more Karma?] - Vitamin B12 Supplementation - Verbal-Explorations in Snowfield's continued studies on his book Lord of the Rings, he tries a new take on his video of the morning: The Hobbit. He recited the lines from Books (1-2) in the order "Title, Chapter and Act"; and the chapter from Book (3) in the order "Section/Chapter, Book, and Act." "I then identified and grouped all the passages that I could- (in my own words) "group together the first part of Journeys" (i.e. the introduction - and rightly so - of the main quest line) and on and on- into (and I was hoping that people would enjoy this as much as I did on that wondrous "the visit of Earendil" night seven years ago), as well as defined a new small adventure. I believe I have a solid base to build upon. I also challenged myself with "reviewing" the book, with a more academic approach. There was some chuckle worthy content here, of course, and also I started to share what I learned, since a few seemed to be buried in the maze of words that I had to plow thru in order to get to the point. I wouldn't be surprised if this is a trend for general audiences and I decided that if the book is having this kind of impact on people, they should be commenting with good questions and offering their own input/inquiries. If I may borrow the terminology of the industry-developers are what we call them. After the start of my first leg, I was constantly ravenous (like a Djinn hungry for his next conjuration - after a feast). I also ate and drank whatever they offered, which included packed western style lunch, potatoe salad and whipped cream, chicken pizza, ham and cheese pizza and most of all, crisp, fajita-like chicken bits that they served in lettuce cups: soooo good. Morning Correspondent PART ONE. THE HOBBIT: THE BOOK After receiving some very informative feedback about the video, he likes the idea of combining parts from the movie (act 1 and 2 - as well as the sub-diary in act 1 into act 3 and act 5 and act 6 and the Epilogue from act 2 into act 4 and act 7
