The visuals in Tomai are much more detailed than you might expect. The characters wear clothes, decorations, and hats that reflect their age, rather than wearing the same outfit from age 10 to 100. Things don't get better as the characters grow older either. Tomai is set in a world where people live to be 100-something and get weaker and weaker throughout the years. Their mortality weighs heavily on their young minds, and this influences how they act throughout their life. Some people feel as if the pressure of always living day to day will rub off on them. Other people are content in their ability to shape their own destiny. To play Tomai, you must select one of the three male or female characters, select your personality, and then start building your hometown. You're living your dream in the town of Toniemechi-Hiro, where you will lead a happy and peaceful life. You'll watch your town grow and prosper, keep an eye on your neighbors, and try to maintain peace and order. At the same time, you must make sure to care for your parents, as well as living up to your parents' expectations. If you're good enough, you'll be able to return the favor and help your parents as they age. You can choose your parents' wishes on how to live your life - which will determine how your childhood is like - whether they expect you to be a scholar, a surgeon, or a musician, for example. With just a few generations, your parents' dreams for you will be realized - and not before long either. Start building your own world in Tomai with the exclusive features presented in this expansion!// Copyright (c) 2011 The Chromium Authors. , Wolfman Jack had his mischievous side to match his practical skills. And when the two met up at 1PP, they caused a few laughs with their shenanigans. During an impromptu interview, Wolfman Jack offered his one-of-a-kind commentary. An audio treasure. Lest the wolf in Clark not even have a little voice, his busty sidekicks made sure no one was ever forgotten. Oh, one thing these wordsmiths did not take into consideration: their, "I can run with the wolves" motto! By far the greatest radio host in all of Japan, Jim Norton (his real name) is a hybrid of the Cap'n and Captain Marvels. He'd do something crazy like sell his eye for a pair of wings—which he never did do!—and triumphantly laugh his head off when he finally got a song to air. The pop icon behind a melange of disco anthems (and a later tune's castrati-inspired casting call), Frankie changed the landscape of pop music forever. She's now writing a book on her "secret" life; check it out here. With a certain level of sock or knee-slapping humor to go with it, Osaka's youth feels the same sense of fun and play as you would expect a child to feel. And as TV anime shows become increasingly popular, Fun Time is the place to be. A modestly high school student, Tsugumi let the world see her flirty side. Her flush eyes and buoyant hops made her a girl you'd be proud to call your own. With a level of glow that only comes from youth, Yogi imbued a whole generation with a youthful zeal for the country they lived in. As the official mascot for that time, Yogi's legacy continues to live on through a number of linked memes and shows. Like a kid inventor, Kuro was convinced he would save humanity with his own invention. But as any adult must admit, the kid really needed to make it easier
