Dietary antioxidant supplementation inhibits focal epileptiform discharges in the developing rat. Focal, macroscopic epileptiform discharges (fEDs) are known to occur spontaneously and in various models of seizures. The presence of fEDs has been proposed to result from an increase in reactive oxygen species (ROS) within the vulnerable brain. Antioxidants, which reduce ROS, may inhibit fEDs. We studied fEDs in developing rats fed an antioxidant-enriched diet. Antioxidants were added to the drinking water from postnatal day 10 to 21 (10, 100 and 200 mg/kg) and fEDs in the dentate gyrus were quantified at postnatal day 21. To control for the effects of antioxidant deprivation during gestation, antioxidant-enriched (50 mg/kg) and normal diets were fed to pregnant and lactating dams. Antioxidant feeding decreased the incidence of fEDs in the dentate gyrus by 32 and 67% in the treatment groups, compared to vehicle-treated dams. We conclude that a diet rich in antioxidants inhibits fEDs in the rat dentate gyrus in a dose-dependent manner, and that a similar mechanism may underlie the inhibition of fEDs in patients given antioxidants.Traci Grouse Traci Grouse (born April 7, 1961) is an American author. Anne Hathaway is not the greatest actress, but she's close — and her talent will be on full display as she tackles Shakespeare's towering tragedy "King Lear" this season. The two-time Oscar nominee has been tapped to star in the BBC's stage adaptation of the Shakespeare play, the first by the Royal Shakespeare Company. "The play is a towering monument to the language, is absolutely intoxicating, and I am very, very excited to be the part of it," Hathaway, who has worked with fellow renowned thespians Kate Winslet and Jude Law before, said Wednesday in a statement. "I feel like I've always known that I've had the next line in my performance," Hathaway, who will play the title role, added. "It's the perfect forum to prove to myself that I'm not just some pretty face — that I can own a part." Ahead of the run, she's out doing publicity and promotion for the production. The BBC World Service aired a preview of it Wednesday, which fans can see here. Hathaway has appeared in movies including "Rachel Getting Married" and "Les Misérables" — and will soon be seen alongside fellow Oscar nominees Aaron Sorkin and Jennifer Lawrence in "The Princess Bride." Her stage credits include starring in "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Nighttime" on Broadway, for which she received a Tony nomination. The BBC version of "King Lear," the story of a decrepit king who loses his mind, is directed by Michael Blakemore, who won a Tony and Olivier for his 2007 "The Winter's Tale" production for the Royal Shakespeare Company. "My understanding of Shakespeare's language means I'd be so excited to play this part," Blakemore said in a statement. "But I'm also incredibly excited by the challenge that is Anne Hathaway. She has already proven herself on stage so I can't wait to see what kind of fiery Lear she'll bring to the stage. It's going to be a real treat. I wish her all the luck, and I'm already looking forward to the audience's reaction when she steps out in front of them." Hathaway is the latest star to join the cast, which includes Matthew Rhys, Patrick Stewart, Rose Byrne, Olivia Colman and Chiwetel Ejiofor. While the adaptation of "King Lear" has had acclaimed directors, such as Derek Jacobi,
