I don't want to bother to explain how great this game is, because it's almost perfect. The controls and movement are snappy and responsive. Even the ROTOR BLADE, which when using for the first time, seems a bit clunky but soon regains its twitchiness, especially if you use the RIGHT trigger to overdrive it. Also, the abilities that you can use, from the basic one, to the super-capable ones, make this game a blast. You have the power to do anything from 'rapid fire' to 'overdrive' (the combination of "spin-rapid-fire" and "spin-clutch-A/X"), from the basic to the pros, from the basic 'laser' to the power-slashing 'ion' that destroys every surface it touches. Also, the whole overdrive system is dicy, and sure to unlock your inner power-spiker, here you have the only one who can control such a super-dangerous weapon; and that's only when you have unlocked it. King of the Universe is a collaborative album from South Korean hip hop group Epik High and American rapper Future. It was released on June 18, 2016 by Future's own record label of the same name and distributed by Epic Records. The album includes guest appearances by Far East Movement's Lunice, Q-Tip and Justin Vernon from Bon Iver, and additional production from a variety of producers, with hooks and co-production from Epik High's main production team of Eunkwang and SHINee's main producer, Key Club. The production of the album was inspired by the legendary sound engineer Lee Wilson. The album was composed of eleven tracks, with lyrics by Soo, Verbal Jint, and Yoo Jae-Sung. It was originally planned to be released on August 29, 2015, but was pushed up to a year later, primarily due to the release of Future's third studio album DS2. Upon its release, King of the Universe debuted at number one on Billboards World Albums chart and number two on the US Billboard 200 with 125,000 album-equivalent units, within the first week of release. It was certified gold by BIA/RIAA and was awarded a platinum certification in Canada. It received positive reviews from critics, some of whom thought it was one of the best collaborative albums of 2016, along with H.A.M. and The Witness. The release was preceded by four singles: "Champion" featuring American singer-songwriter Lord Ezrin on October 25, 2015, "Unfair" featuring label mate FARIÉ on December 13, 2015, "U.S.A." with English singer-songwriter Sam Smith on December 22, 2015, and on April 11, 2016, "Everybody".

Background and development In early 2015, South Korean hip hop group Epik High was preparing for their debut in the United States, and while touring, they had commented on the possibility of working with American rapper Future. Later that year, JYP Entertainment approached them about the idea of collaborating, and they managed to reach an agreement. As a result, Epik High signed with Def Jam Recordings and Epic Records, making them the only Korean group signed to Epic. In December 2015, Epic Records was awarded a U.S. trademark for a song by American producer No I.D. Although they were not known for producing hip hop, they expressed enthusiasm about the idea of collaborating with prominent rap artists. Future was
