Features Key:

- Are you a healthy pet? Do you know how diet can affect your cat's health?
- Your cat's health is important. It's as important as your own health. All cats, especially senior cats, can benefit from a healthy diet.
- Dog food is being replaced by many raw food diets. Is your cat on this diet?

Cat on a Diet™ is a 2D and 3D interactive game.

The cat is an agile cat with a camera eye. You need to feed and play with your cat. Feed your cat dog food, fruits and vegetables, add vitamins and minerals to it, and it will become thin and bonny, lively and healthy. You can play with your cat in many ways:

- grounding the cat on the carpet
- showering
- petting the cat
- climbing on things

Cat on a Diet™ is an online game. You share your score with Facebook!

The purpose of the game is to improve the health of your cat:

- Feed it all you can, the more you feed, the more you will find. Feed pets and pets in your neighborhood also.
- Do not deprive your cat of anything, feed it healthy food. Vegetables and fruits protect your cat and make it fat. This can ruin your diet.
- Do not forget to add vitamins and minerals to your cat's diet. Baby food with milk should not be a staple of your cat's diet.
- In meat is great. Give your cat more of it if you want to enjoy the game.

, Finding Purpose by Battling Depression By David Hill Posted 3 years ago I recently spoke at a conference and was offered the opportunity to write a blog post about my experience. You can read the full post here. What follows is a version of that, which will be published in one form or another on this page. Thanks to David Holt who helped me edit this down from its initial six page manuscript. Listening to the speakers I recently spent five hours listening to the speakers at a major higher education conference. I was tempted to skip the opening set (the main presenter seemed completely out of place and struggled with the PowerPoint slides) and take notes during the next day of speeches. But finally, with running out of conference time, I managed to listen through half of the proceedings and took a few notes. These are a summary of my impressions and on describing my experience. The experience was delightfully exhausting. Just the effort of programming into my brain fifty very technically advanced presentations — on research methodology, HCI, the nature of learning, designing instruction, understanding how people study, and more — would normally have left me tired and frustrated. Even worse, I was able to apply none of this knowledge and saw common mistakes made by world leading instructors, not just in the sessions I attended but in the sessions I did not attend. After hours of listening and taking notes I emerged from the conference with feelings of guilt and sadness. I felt used and abused. I felt depressed. I feel sorry for many of those presenting at the conference, simply because the level of effort on their behalf it seems excessive. As well as feeling bad that the world had taken so much from the impressive speakers, I was also guilty for not doing more. I had the opportunity to explore and take advantage of some great sessions throughout the conference. It is a great shame that I did not know about these. Sure, they might have been too basic for me, or not the best fit for an audience that is of a different academic age. But just knowing about the sessions would have been enough to take advantage of them. If I had known all of the sessions better then I might have attended more and even given a talk or two. An experience of this length can leave you feeling very guilty. For the last few days I have been telling myself “there has been good done by an audience that should not have been taken,” or “if the speaker would have built time into their contract

In the distant future, The Necropolis was the first man-made city, built as a self-sufficient civilization. People are slowly discovering a new threat - a mysterious parasite that kills by absorbing other living creatures. The main protagonist of the game, a woman named Aurora, has a secret that may prove to be her downfall. As you play as her, you'll uncover the truth about her past. System Requirements Minimum ADVERTISEMENT OS: OS X 10.9 or later Processor: 2.4GHz Intel Core i7-4800MQ Memory: 8GB RAM Graphics: GeForce GTX 660/AMD Radeon HD 7870 DirectX: Version 11 Hard Drive: 200 MB available space Sound Card: DirectX Compatible Additional Notes: Multiplayer required Recommended OS: OS X 10.10 or later Processor: 3.0GHz Intel Core i7-4790 Memory: 8GB RAM Graphics: GeForce GTX 760/AMD Radeon R9 290 DirectX: Version 11 Hard Drive: 200 MB available space Sound Card: DirectX Compatible Additional Notes: Multiplayer required Video Game Reviews About This Game The game Necropolis is a so-called "ludonarrative" game. It is trying to create an enjoyable, story-driven experience by allowing the player to customize the gameplay experience. Additionally, it contains different game modes and a dynamic difficulty system. This means that the player can have different options to customize gameplay and control how difficult the game is. Aurora started as a normal citizen of the Necropolis. But when she was handed over to the government, she was forced to help them build their own army to catch the six known "Subterrene" insects. Aurora tries to survive and keep her cool. The Necropolis is a roguelike survival game. It is a game where the player is not restricted by an objective or route, but can develop his own style of gameplay. In order to survive, the player must eat, drink, save and sleep. In order to progress, the player must survive encounters with monsters and bandits. These encounters are unpredictable, because the game utilizes a simple, yet strategic, AI system. Aurora is a normal citizen who has a secret. As she plays through the game she discovers the truth about her past, enemies, allies and true
