À- Softpgsm 8.80 INCL Crack. .Bootlegger's Daughter As a kid, the daughter of a bootlegger was one of the things I most wanted to be. Sure, as I imagine all kids do, I wanted to be a ballplayer or a pop star. But one thing I was never interested in was being a woman who drank moonshine. That was a job only men could do, not women, certainly not children. And no matter how nice those women might be - and they could be very nice - they made a lot of mistakes. And they were almost always women who drank booze. A lot of booze. Now, I'm sure there were some nice girls who drank at home. But I never had any desire to know them. Though, years later, my husband told me they were much worse than I imagined. They would talk about their "drinking girlfriends" while the old man was out telling stories or playing cards. They would even mention the old lady who worked in the coal mine. My husband would grin and say it was pretty cool, in fact the only thing cooler, and then tell the stories of his own drinking girlfriends. You see, I was learning my first lesson about women who drink. I was learning how to distinguish between women who drink and women who drink too much. And, if I was going to be a woman who drank, I wanted to drink with men - or, as my husband would say, with "men." Women who drank with women got on my nerves. They seemed to find it necessary to always take charge of the party, the conversation, the business at hand. Women who drank alone never seemed to get along with other women, they couldn't hide that they were always the "short one." They seemed to be happiest when they had the men hanging on their every word. But, most women's drinking had nothing to do with men. It was all about themselves. At least, that's what my husband and his drinking girlfriends told me. So, I figured I would just steer clear of women who drank.
