N.D.III.1992). While this case will not be complex in regard to an accounting of funds, it is a complex case in that it will require counsel to attend to the accounting, including calculating those funds that will be distributed, calculating the tax to which the creditors are entitled, calculating the distributions to be made to creditors with priority over the Trustee, calculating the distribution to creditors with priority over the Trustee, calculating the distributions to be made to creditors, which should then be added to the distribution to be made to creditors, and calculating the distribution to be made to general unsecured creditors. [3] On a related note, the Jackson court held that the debtor retained the requisite control to render her liable for willful and malicious injury. The Court held as follows: In the present case, it is clear that the debtor, as director of the corporation, was the President of that corporation. It is thus clear that the debtor was an officer of the corporation, that she was responsible for directing the affairs of the corporation, and that she enjoyed a high degree of control over the corporation, particularly with regard to the collection and disbursement of the funds collected at the expense of the corporation. Jackson, 864 F.2d at 1152-53. In the case at bar, the Debtor was the sole shareholder of the corporation, served as its President, and possessed an even higher degree of control over the corporation than did the director in Jackson, as he was also the Director of Human Resources and provided all of the funds to the corporation. Thus, the Jackson decision is inapposite to the case at bar. See, also, In re Smith, 74 B.R. at 846 ("[I]t is clear that the debtor, who is the sole proprietor of the business, is the main operator of the business."); United States v. McGuire, 15 B.R. 989, 990 (Bankr.N.D.Ind.1981) ("[T]he debtor is a sole proprietor with complete control over the [business]. The collection of accounts receivable and the application of the proceeds for corporate purposes are controlled by the debtor.") (citation omitted); In re Courtney, 18 B.R. at 422 ("[T]he debtor here is the sole proprietor of the two corporations and is the 'only person who can turn it off' even if he chooses not to do so.")
