What can a humble 12-year-old girl who lives in a town of dwarves and elves create in this world? Inspired by beautiful drawings by Yoriko Kaji that she shared in her family, you play as the first-ever Elf-dwarf-human child. As an artifact endowed with the power to control the elements of earth, air, and fire, there's no one more suited to defend the land from invaders. Yoriko Kaji's story is a "different, yet related, world view to classic fiction." It is a free non-commercial project, totally free and open to all. A long time ago a powerful and unyielding clan of Elden Lords forbade us (we are no more than a humble "Derelict Soul") from interfering in the affairs of others to take the Elden Ring into our hands. Now while we looked with envy upon the Elden Lords when they took the ring from the Elves, listening to their descriptions of the lords' riches in Elden, and beyond the Shadows, us Derelict Souls, still in awe of the existence of a group of Elden Lords, we were taken by surprise when the Lord's grandson, who was once but a stripling, rebelled. The Old Lords punished the youth by banishing him from their domain. The young daunted by this setback, the boy bided his time and sharpened his wits. When the Old Lords fell to old age, he gathered his forces and went into the Land Beyond. His journey was a long one and at last he came to the gates of the Old Elden Realm. The Old Elden Lords saw him and knew he was no ordinary man. They took pity on him and negotiated with him to take the Ring for themselves, it would be their way of apologizing for their ancestors' sin. Despite their powerful magic, they could not resist the temptations of the forbidden fruit the ring gave into their hands. Their greed led to their downfall. The Ring is still held by the Elden Lords, the most powerful of their kind in the Lands Between, and their fate depends on you, an ordinary Derelict Soul, as they had once tried to do to a once powerful Lord
