DDT2000 Patch 12.0 · TechnoBuffalo.com - CNET - Reviews · Ddt2000 Patch 12.0 · Multimedia Downloader (MDx) Patch .As Democratic presidential candidates begin to claim victory in their bid to take on Donald Trump, one New Hampshire Democratic candidate continues to cite his chances of winning the White House. A trio of primary challengers will get a podium tonight to claim victory in their quest to take on President Donald Trump and the Republicans in the 2020 election cycle, while Joe Biden is expected to be official nominee later this week. Michael Bennet is one of the candidates who has the lowest chance of beating Trump in the Granite State, according to an assessment by a study published by the New England Council. The study found that Biden and Bernie Sanders will take on Trump in November, while Pete Buttigieg and Elizabeth Warren are the more likely candidates to defeat the president. A UMass Lowell study published Monday, however, found that 19 percent of New Hampshire Democrats supported the 74-year-old Vermont Senator in the state's primary. Scroll down for video Bennet speaks with supporters during a town hall meeting in New Hampshire on March 2. The former

Colorado Senator hopes to take on Donald Trump in the Granite State Michael Bennet may be trying to take down President Donald Trump in the state, according to this study published by the New England Council, but the Democrat is in the worst position in terms of taking on Trump 'Bennet is simply a better candidate in many ways,' said Stephen Schneck, a professor of political science at John F. Kennedy University who also advised New Hampshire Democrats on their primary in 2016. Schneck told MailOnline that Trump has dominated the field 'hands down' so far and that Bennet – the former Colorado Senator who ousted the well-known star of the Republican Party – is simply the most obvious candidate among a rag-tag group of candidates who are trying to beat the Republican. 'The field is so compressed you can't really declare anyone as the nominee,' he said. 'At this point, you can't even begin to say who the nominee will be because the list of candidates is so long and
