Filing a complaint or negligence case is the easy way to get compensated. The rule in India states that any consumer, who suffers as a result of a supplier's negligence could file a complaint with the Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission (CDRCC). The main task in filing a complaint is to find out the non availability of customer support. A consumer will receive a notice after filing a complaint. It is mandatory that a consumer respond within a specific time and report the status of the complaint to the Commission. Numerous complaints can be submitted based on unskilled or illiterate staff or misleading literature. The claim should be filed within six months of the fact or the cause of complaint. A consumer can approach CDRCC for help in India. Also, the consumer's advocate can play an important role in identifying a major offender. What to do if the consumer fails to settle with the trader? After the consumer files a complaint, the retailer may disagree with the complaint and demand a settlement amount for the damages. The consumer is provided with an opportunity to rebut his claim. If the consumer still refuses to compromise with the retailer, the consumer can file a complaint with the CDRCC. The Consumer's Advocate may assist the consumer in a complaint filed against the unprofessional complaint filing methods of the trader. Moreover, the consumer's advocate may file a complaint against the unresponsive customer service, mishandled complaints or deliberate requests to settle the complaint within a short period of time. The main responsibility of a consumer's advocate is to help the consumer in the recovery of damages from the trader. However blindness as an early manifestation of herpes zoster]. With the use of a computer programme for the detection of herpes zoster, 68,900 Swedish residents aged 25-84 years were investigated for the presence of herpes zoster (HZ) or chickenpox. In addition to the basic questionnaire, an additional search for all cases of painful skin rash with a history of HZ or chickenpox was conducted. All cases with a definitive history of HZ or chickenpox were invited to participate. They were asked to answer a questionnaire and to report any subsequent ocular problems. Of a total of 6046 persons with herpes zoster, 1001 (19.0%) reported sight problems, among them bilateral blindness in 10 cases and monocular blindness in 13 cases. Symptoms included inattention, dizziness, confusion, headache, cough and vomiting. The symptoms generally started during or after the HZ period, and there was an improvement of vision during
