- Character Creation and Customization • “Prepare for battle”! “Lords among Lords” is a fantasy action RPG which takes place in a fictional world. In this world, there are numerous races and classes of people, and the main character can freely join them and customise their character. For example, if you create a Warrior character who is strong against wooden and nonmagical weapons and are weak against steel and magic, you can make them a great practical weapon against nonmagical weapons and a fearsome blade against magic. Or you can make the character an expert magician, whose spells come from an inborn magic power. You can freely change the colours and costumes of your character, and also create a unique design that reflects your play style.

- Each Class with Their Unique Features You can freely join a class and take on quests and battles. The main classes are Warrior, Armorer, and Mage. In the Warrior class, we can emphasise physical strength. In the Armorer class, we can emphasise the ability to handle equipment and work on enhancing abilities. In the Mage class, we can emphasise magic abilities and enjoy a wide variety of techniques. In addition, you can also freely mix and combine the equipment and abilities of the three classes. Among all the classes, the Warrior class is most flexible, offering a wide variety of techniques, and all the other classes are also viable choices. Additionally, each class has their own armour and weapons.

- Huge Dungeons That Will Test Your Strength! Lords in the Lands Between are born with their own class and technique, but they have developed their talents over the years by exploring the world. * “A large and confusing world demands wisdom, and each of your expeditions will let you understand the entire world.” The world of Tarnished is a huge world full of mysteries and disasters. “An incredible world awaits us to discover.” In addition to a huge world, the game also has an immense content. As you explore, there are various dungeons with three-dimensional designs that will test your skill to the limit. * “Develop your skills in order to grow.” We have selected each aspect that can affect your character’s growth, in order to make your growth experience more enjoyable.

Speaker after speaker trudges through their closing statements before the five-member panel of "experts" - which the American Enterprise Institute's vice president of studies James Burk dives into like the legislature of a sovereign foreign country would before cowering to the U.S. president. "Despite my rhetoric, I'm not a Nazi, nor am I a white supremacist, nor an extremist, nor a neo-Nazi," says Burk. "I do not believe that white Americans are destined for either perpetual subjugation or extermination." After an opening statement by well-known journalist and author Andrew Sullivan, the room lights up, and the floor gets down to business. The first speaker is Rhonya Starr, a transgender woman from Florida, and it's her mind-blowing testimony that begins an evening full of shocking insights, from conservative commentator Glenn Beck, to feminist-turned-extremist Ann Coulter, to the bombshell revelation by Bray that he's gay. Bray's testimony: "The Boy Scouts of America are being used to groom our young people into accepting a tradition of heterosexuality," he says, with a hint of fear that his words may be misconstrued. When the audience breaks into applause, Burk cuts him off: "I want to call upon the American Enterprise Institute audience to remain silent." Burk has a point. After all, the speech could be misconstrued by anyone familiar with, well, just about anything ever said by anyone who claims to be a libertarian, or a conservative. So, at one point in the evening, panelist Dave Nalle, who describes himself as "a campus free speech fanatic," suggests to Burk that he can't possibly trust panelists who also advocate free speech. "If I want to trust panelists, I can't trust them at all," Nalle says, "because they're unprincipled." Next up, it'
