My problem is that in the onViewCreated I do not have access to the root View of the fragment. I have set @Layout.ViewById("fragment_container") but it only returns null. I know this is the correct way to use fragments. I just want to have an easier method of initializing it. The other way I tried was to do something in the onCreateView but this seems wrong. I am setting up the rootView of my fragment in onCreateView. Is there some way to get to it in onViewCreated. @Override public View onCreateView(LayoutInflater inflater, View

Swift Rise contains several new maps, three new villages, five new clans and four new characters, who reside in their villages. They are now ready to explore the lands of My Lands: Swift Rise. The main challenge in Swift Rise DLC will be to demonstrate the number of resources. The map of Swift Rise DLC will be as follows: Khalia Junction - A large map designed to give you a good view of the situation of the early days of the battle. Start the game in a place that will be suitable for both sides, and achieve the goal, which will give you points for both sides. Monmouth - At the first contact we can get a head start with our armies - a strategic place, where you can see all the events on the sea. Unfortunately, their work is not finished. Thalia - A village of the Snowcrafters, where the ground is like snow, and where there are spirits in the air. Tauros - The place where the earth trembles, where mana is abundant, and where we can test the strength of our troops. Brennus - A small island near the continent - a good place to catch up on unfinished works. The DLCs are available in two versions: 1. DLC Starter Pack - instantly unlock all the Starter map maps of the DLC. 2. Combo Pack - will consist of all the Starter map maps and the three DLC maps (Khalia Junction, Monmouth and Thalia), so the start of the game is more complete. $- 2 + 4 * l - 1 + 3 * l \text{ to the form } d * l + n \text{ and } g \text{ i v e d } . 3 \text{ Express } 2 * c - 2 * c + 3 * c + (1 - 1 - 2) * (2 * c - 5$

Top Make Take Rating This Jump pack is an entry level jet pack which is very easy to use and will take to any hydroplane although its preference is for a low thrust hydroplane. Perfect For Hydroplane Pilot: Make Score 100 Birds Scale 0.75 Description: You pull out your trusty Helium Prop, and you are off, flying downwards down the river with a healthy hull speed over one knot. The air is chillier than Mill River once again, but your mach 3 jet pack (mach 3 jets are known as multi-fuel cyborg jets as shown in the picture to the right) just spins out the seconds to get you and your hydroplane to the nearest dry dock to be patched up and out for another round, you know it would be salty for you to see a goalless round, even on the water. The small bolt on pirate jumppack(s) take up a total of 30 litres, which is roughly a gallon, and 2 boosters. Operation: All the procedure from ripping the jett pack from the jets, to fitting it to the hydroplane is a breeze, requiring you to attach the two plug type bolts one on each side of the wing of the hydroplane, then on the top of the engine bay of the hydroplane, just to the left and right of the gennie of the engine. The Pirate Hull Jet Pack is designed for underwater jet based flight. When under water and you pull the front and back clamps away (in the picture to the right), the Once upon a time, a little boy found an old battle axe in a little kennel, and traded some gold for it. He then used the battle axe to slay all manner of monsters and innately evil crooks, and his name was Tarquin. He eventually became a great warrior, and so he is known as Tarquin the Great. He then sought adventure and would travel through randomised forests, battle fiendish castle guards, save silly villagers and delve into ancient crypts. Many bloody slays later, he would be awarded with knighthoods and titles, yet in the end, he would be betrayed by a dear friend and revert to a humble peasant. You are the peasant, "Sir Smedieval", who just won the game on a drunken bet with our neighbour, "Little Jax". You left him groaning on the floor. You'd like to get away from the village, where your nature is misunderstood. But things took a turn for the worse, and you are now trapped with your friend, Little Jax and the Grim Reaper. You've just found in the King's dungeon the secret to the spring under the Manor. The King is coming after you and you will have to get out of this dungeon. You are now under the control of the King, who also has control of all of Brannach. He has put all the citizens in the castle to stop your escape, and he sends his knights to stop you from leaving the Castle. Which path will you take? . . . . Gameplay The game's overall design is based around small rooms. Instead of doing the expected thing and using doors to open larger rooms, doors are usually used to transition from one small room to the next. Each room has it's own set of hallways and small area's which are important for getting out of a room quickly. There are many puzzles and clues to help you move forward, but they are not always obvious and some require some thinking. There are many ways to die. The objective is to find the quickest way to get out of each room. The Manor room features a Boss Knight fight and a Boss Treasure room.
