FILE PHOTO - Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu makes a speech at the opening of the new US embassy in Jerusalem, Israel May 14, 2018. REUTERS/Ronen Zvulun Netanyahu was speaking just hours before Trump signed an executive order to begin reinstating U.S. sanctions on Iran that were eased under the 2015 accord. "Iran today is acting more aggressively. This is a mistake, I mean no - I didn't mean that Iran is a threat. But this nuclear deal was a mistake," Netanyahu told reporters at the annual meeting of Jewish leaders in New York. ❖

"It's all the same, essentially," says lead researcher Aaron Carroll, an anthropology professor at the University of Arizona. New research suggests the human brain would be better off if it picked the yellow stuff. It has more of the nutrients needed for chemical reactions involved in memory and it's better for us to snap that delicious-looking bun in half than to tear at a hard-boiled egg. The study, published in the Proceedings of the Royal Society B, recommends that people try to eat an equal-amount portion of leafy vegetables, like spinach, and fruits and vegetables in other colors. The suggestion is based on a hunch that most of the vitamins and minerals in food, including some needed to make those chemical reactions happen, are found in the yellow stuff. "We think that food in yellow is the most likely to be balanced in terms of nutrients," 0cc13bf012
