How can this be achieved in Angular 2? A: If you don't want to use @Output, you can access the parameters from your parent component and pass the object through @Input like so: @Component({ selector: 'app-button', template: ` toggle: {{ toggle }} {{ text }}`) export class ButtonComponent { @Input() toggle; @Input() text; click() { console.log(`${this.toggle} ${this.text}`); } You can also look into EventEmitter - 0cc13bf012

Similarly, the finding of adequate employment opportunities for a qualified person was no longer a consideration to be weighed. Further, all of the facilities, including those related to health care, were made available at the site of the new employer. This was in contrast to the situation in which there was no site available for the new employer in a self-employment situation where facilities were not available or were inadequate. We also found that the degree of involvement in the operation of the firm by the employee, which may have been important in terms of the determination of whether the worker was self-employed or employed, is not a determining factor. In the case of the claimant, we found that she had no actual participation in the operation of the business of the employer. She received a paycheck for services rendered and did not have any part in the financial operation of the new employer. She was paid no less than any other employee in the office where she worked. The fact that she was not actively involved in the operation of the business of the employer is not determinative of whether she was self-employed or employed. We have carefully considered the briefs of the employer and we find no error in the findings of the deputy commissioner. The employee may recover, within the period as provided by law, as much as 50 per cent of the amount awarded, for reasonable and necessary medical and hospital services
