4.8 CrackedI.1. Field

of the Invention The invention relates to a

method for forming a

high density

semiconductor

device, and more specifically to a method for forming a high density semiconductor device by using a technique for forming an uppermost inter-electrode dielectric film and a technique for forming a lowest inter-electrode dielectric film. 2. Description of the Prior Art As the integration of semiconductor devices increases, the resulting size of each transistor is reduced. For example, as the gate length of the MOS transistors decreases, the contact area between the contact plugs and the diffusion regions reduces.

Furthermore, a node to node distance of the transistors also decreases. As a result, gate-induced-drain-leakage (GIDL) current generated in the channel region increases. The GIDL current may result in a degradation of device performance. Consequently, a structure for improving the GIDL current and a method of forming the structure are required. As the value and use of information continues to increase, individuals and businesses seek additional ways to process and store information. One option is an information handling system. An information handling system generally processes, compiles, stores, and/or communicates information or data for business, personal, or other purposes. Because technology and information handling needs and requirements may vary between different applications, information handling systems may also vary regarding what information is handled, how the

information is
handled, how much
information is
processed, stored, or
communicated, and
how quickly and efficiently the information may be

communicated. The variations in information handling systems allow for information handling systems to be general or configured for a specific user or specific use such as financial transaction processing, reservations,

enterprise data
storage, or global communications. In addition, information
handling systems
may include a variety of hardware and software resources
that may be configured to

process, store, and communicate
information and may include one or more
computer systems,
data storage
systems, and networking
systems. 'Affluenza'
