The bill funding government operations — setting federal spending levels at $1.012 trillion for 2014 — has been passed by the House and Senate but hasn't been sent to President Obama's desk yet. As of late Wednesday morning, no agreement had been reached between the two parties. House members were put on a three-day shutdown-free pass. But lawmakers won't be able to pick up a check on Friday as a result of the threat of a government shutdown. Members of Congress have been raking in more than $174,000 a year — about $14,000 more than the average American worker. The 16-day partial shutdown that started Sept. 30 halted pay for about 800,000 federal employees, and about 25 percent of the government was closed. House members will continue to get paid throughout the weekend, and then resume on Monday. There was a moment of panic on Wednesday for members of Congress and their staff, as contracts had expired. "Members, staffers and their families are running out of money," according to the D.C. Regional Partnership, a business group. Members of the House and Senate would have to wait another few days before 6d1f23a050
