Like before, the system is available to those in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, and Rhode Island. Other states are coming. According to Engadget, the company is planning to bring the feature to its stores in New York, Maryland, and Virginia in the near future. Amazon tells us that the other 30 states will follow, but we can't say when exactly they will be adding it. Amazon is expanding its Pay With a Scan feature to all Prime Now pickup stores in the U.S. The goal is to make it easier for customers who use Prime Now to pickup purchases on the go. Right now, if a customer wants to use a GoMo, they have to use the app on a smartphone, open a shopping list, and then scan the QR code when they are at the store. The last time we heard about the program it was called Plan to Pickup. But we know the feature is available at select stores for customers of Prime Now because the company made it available to GoMo users at certain locations. As we have reported before, Amazon's partnership with Instacart lets GoMo users order groceries through the app and then have the shopping lists and purchased items shipped to their home. The expanded Pay With a Scan feature is available to all GoMo users in these states. For those in other states, the program is still limited to those enrolled in the cloud service. "You will be able to use scan to pay for orders placed on the Amazon.com website or through in-store pay with a scan apps for those customers," Amazon says. Amazon is expanding its Pay With a Scan feature to all Prime Now Pickup stores in the U.S. Amazon says it has been working with the store owner community for some time to bring this feature to its stores.
