V6.0.0. 0.3.0.0.02.An easy-to-use, unbiased mathematical formula to increase patient satisfaction and reduce the number of patients who are sent to the toilet. To assess the efficacy of an intervention based on a mathematical formula designed to increase the proportion of patients for whom the rate of indwelling urinary catheterization is the criterion for switching from one category of cleaning system to another. The criterion for switching was based on a random sampling of 40 patients per shift. During the intervention, the criteria were changed from catheterization for 100% of patients (before the switch) to catheterization for approximately 98.5% of patients (prediction). A quasi-experimental design was applied. A medical unit of a Tunisian university teaching hospital. The rate of indwelling urinary catheterization was 0.55 (95% CI 0.47-0.63) before the intervention and 0.35 (95% CI 0.29-0.42) after the intervention. The increase was statistically significant ($Z = 2.6$; $P = .005$). The number of patients who required switching to their own clothes (95% CI -0.01 to 0.12) or to catheter care (95% CI -0.18 to 0.19) was not significantly changed after the intervention. Satisfaction scores were not significantly different before and after the intervention. An easy-to-use, unbiased mathematical formula increased the proportion of patients for whom catheterization was the criterion for switching. Patient satisfaction is not significantly changed.Swelling of intraocular lenses after laser in situ keratomileusis. Two cases are described in which accidental laser ablation of iris and lens material occurred in LASIK procedures. The microscopic investigation of the two eyes showed the presence of thin capsular lens deposits that surrounded the intraocular lens implants. Both eyes had phacoemulsification of the lenses performed. The healing of the cornea was normal in both eyes. No inflammatory reaction was observed after the anterior chamber reformation. Visual acuity returned to its preoperative level in both eyes. The risk of this complication appears to be small but warrants a close postoperative follow-up of the visual result. A detailed postoperative slit-lamp examination is mandatory
