Solucionario De Transferencia De Calor, Jose Manrique.Q: Enabling selection to a dropdown I have some data that I am returning that has a 3rd party company selected in a drop down. When I display this data using a data table, the user can have a "Choose Company" option so the user can select which 3rd party company to display. The 3rd party company is set in the database for this record. How can I have the selection of the "Choose Company" value be enabled for the row? A: You could make the third-party company the 'default' selected option: The array return is ["Company 1", 1], ["Company 2", 2], etc Now if you change the records associated_id and company_id, you'll select Company 1 for the record where associated_id = x. The company_id shows the id of the company, so if you're trying to link to the company, you can use something like: And link to the company from the view: For your edit action, you'll want to accept id as an option when the form is submitted. Something like: def edit @user = User.find(params[:id]) @company = Company.find(params[:id]) # NOTE: since we're saving an object, params[:id] will be an object # params will be an array of all the form values, so you'll want something like: # params 6d1f23a050
