Or any other device that I need to use the printer? I have tried a different printer, but it's the same. Can you tell me what i should do? A: This is a driver bug. You need to download the driver from HP website as it's not available in-store.

A scorecard. A good scorecard can help you see both your existing score and what you're doing well and need to improve. And an effective scorecard can help you track your progress. For more tips on creating your own scorecard, we've pulled together our top seven tips from Lisa Loeb and other people who have worked with coaches like you, including: Choosing your personal "other half" Listening for what's telling you, not what you want to hear How to begin Understanding what questions to ask Providing actionable feedback Tracking progress and improving your score We've also put together a scorecard template that can be filled in with the key points we've pulled together. Whatever type of scorecard you create, whether it's regular or seasonal, keep it living and shareable with your clients and their coaches. And for your own reference, you can print this on our free Cheat Sheet for your scorecard or use it to develop your own. About The Author Ed Miringoff has worked for more than a decade to help people improve themselves. He's also the founder of The Growth

Practice, which provides services to individuals, business owners and not-for-profit organisations. What Inspired You to Write This Book? Ed and his family were inspired by his father's passion for personal development. Five Reasons to Work With a Coach There are a number of factors that make a coach ideal for you. Ed and our team of coaches believe that the two biggest are: You have a clear idea of what you want to improve – you set the terms of engagement You are fully committed to your own development Your primary coach is you You can recognise and accept feedback that's been offered to you with integrity Are Your Coaches Dependent on a Paid Contract? No. But you do need to be fully committed to your own development. You can talk about our coaching services and our clients. We also make it easy to start working with us. This is your opportunity
