I feel already bored with this one. The game is quite fun, but the length is kind of short and I dont really see the plot. Most of the characters are just avatars, only the MC is giving voice to the other characters (except for a few). When you put it all together, this is your standard run-and-attack-and-defend RPG with the feature of the MC. Its not that bad, though I still prefer the adult-themed version.

Meanwhile, if youre a fan of the original voice acting in game, youll be happy to know that weve got that covered as well, as well as some other fixes like the original text missing in the menus. Itll be fixed in the next patch, so no worries there. And yes, the red O-E glyph was a typo at launch and will be fixed in the next patch. The only voice line that isnt corrected is the text in the menu at the bottom left of the screen of the main menu. I have yet to encounter such an issue. The game was released a little before launch week, so I would say the game is pretty solid. The quality is probably good enough for the work, but the voice acting in the game definitely needs work. Hopefully, the next update will fix all of those issues. It's a good thing they fixed that issue. Remakes of Pokemon games are rare. Even if they did plan for it, it might be a bad idea to make a remake with the voice acting that im sure its pretty bad. Ill summarize, SP send FAKU the adult version of the game but forgot or omitted change the all ages stuff (removed and changed text, E-MOTE images and voices) well, the patch restored only the E-MOTE images, some sprites and CG but not the removed text and voices. So if you play with the current patch youll se cutted text, muted dialogs or both and some untranslated text.

i agree, the voice actors are the ones to blame, they are not being paid enough for a job they are very responsible with, they get paid per lines and can learn up to 30 lines in a day, so it can be quite difficult to afford to travel and they have to make the living off of just these lines, also note that this is not normal and its not just limited to koe no katachi, such thing happens in most japanese games(in fact it is a culture, it might be in japan, but you can clearly see many japanese games with japanese voice acting for the american market). I myself have japanese games and many of them have voices shifted before the american market release, so i think the way koe no katachi released it really sucks, the people who has done the voice work should get paid more at least up to 160 lines(i know its not much, but they should be considerate) and japanese company should give more space to those workers and it should be taken care of, this whole thing really hurts the japanese companies reputation.
