54. this subject has also been explained above in surah al-baqarah, ayat 172; surah an-nisa, ayat 117, surah al-anaam, ayats 121, 137, surah at- taubah, ayat 31; surah ibrahim, ayat 22; surah al-kahf, ayat 52; surah maryam, ayat 42, surah al-qasas, ayat 63 and e.n. 63 of surah saba. in this connection, the fine explanation given of it by imam razi in his tafsir kabir is also noteworthy. he writes: obey him to whomsoever allah has given power to rule over you. (surah al- israa, ayat 51) it means: obey him as long as he keeps the commands of allah which have been revealed to him. if he is not obedient, then obey him as long as he keeps his promise or keeps on doing things which have been prohibited, and then disobey him, because allah is able to protect you against his evil, just as he is able to prevent you from going astray in matters of belief and abominations. allah does not punish you for obedience, because he is well-aware of your obedience; instead, he grants you protection, as he did to those who believed in the time of the prophet (peace be upon him). 55. this is one of the most important subjects in the qur'an. it is a law of islam that every person who is subject to another or who is bound by law, must obey him, unless he is given a certain licence or permission to disobey him. therefore, it is very important to know what this permission is. this permission has been explained above in surah al-baqarah, ayat 172; surah an-nisa, ayat 117, surah al-anaam, ayats 121, 137, surah at- taubah, ayat 31; surah ibrahim, ayat 22; surah al-kahf, ayat 52; surah maryam, ayat 42, surah al-qasas, ayat 63 and e.n. 63 of surah saba. in this connection, the fine explanation given of it by imam razi in his tafsir kabir is also noteworthy. he writes: it is permissible to disobey him who has no right to command you, if you are allowed to disobey him by a certain ordinance. such as when a man has been given permission to kill his brother, and he has not made a mistake in his killing; or when a man has been given permission to marry a slave girl, and he has not committed a mistake in marrying her. such people are still under your protection. you are not allowed to disobey them without a special permission.

to these two kinds of spirits belong the people whom allah has tested in this world and whom he has fixed upon a life in the hellfire; to these belong the people who are in the habit of joining others in evil, and who transgress moral boundaries. allah has expressed his opinion about them on the basis of his knowledge and is sparing them according to his mercy, and the believers will rejoice at the prospect of meeting with them on the day of judgment. (surah yaseen) an example of this is the person who does not deserve good of any kind from a human being, but who in fact receives good from the most merciful god, and is untouched by the raging fire of torment. (surah yaseen) in the above verse, it is said that the religion of allah is the religion which the monotheist should adopt, and which they themselves have ignored while adopting other gods. allah has explained the basis of such a claim in verses 4 to 6, in particular in verse 5. there are no such others who can attain the rank of monotheism; but if they want to see what they have been assured of, let them reflect upon the fate of the people who adopted the religion of other deities. (surah yaseen) among the shades of hell, a person can only hope for mercy if he had been devout. the almighty god has described the righteous in the qur'an on the basis of four characteristics: they disbelieve in allah, they worship other deities, they break the limits of justice and they deny the signs of allah. (surah yaseen) allah says in verse 8 above: say to those who deny the truth: "the earth belongs to allah, the lord of all the worlds, and to his righteous servants and to the angels: i do not say you shall hasten or delay it. he is the swift in reckoning."
