if there is a clear dividing line between the good guys

and the bad guys, then 'the shawshank redemption' doesn't really have any. indeed, the movie's structure is not so much that of a linear narrative as a series of interlocking story arcs, and the movie's various twists and turns are expertly directed at keeping the audience engaged. the film does away with any form of traditional action in favor of character and dialogue, and this choice works brilliantly. there are some great one-liners (the line "you can take the boy out of the county but you can't take the county out of the boy," for example), but it is the way in which they are delivered that makes them special. the shawshank redemption is one of the best films of the 90s and one of the best films of all time. it's a heartbreaking story, a classic piece of storytelling, and a testament to the human spirit. to say the least, the movie is the definition of a modern masterpiece. this movie takes place in the early 1980's, when the united states was coming off the heels of one of its biggest economic crises. this was the perfect time for a movie that would tackle the subject of redemption, as the nation was struggling to pick itself back up. the story is based on a short story by stephen king. the story takes place in a prison, where a man is being held captive for a crime he did not commit. what follows is an amazing story of redemption. the character of andy dufrane is a very unique character, whose own personal quest for redemption makes this story a masterpiece. the movie has been nominated for 7 academy awards. the shawshank redemption is rated pg-13.
