>>DOWNLOADSuccessful induction therapy in a patient with advanced, therapy-refractory multiple myeloma, given after purging procedures with very low-dose chemotherapy. Although the use of low-dose chemotherapy to achieve complete remission followed by autologous bone marrow transplantation (ABMT) can cure patients with resistant multiple myeloma, there have been few attempts to use this approach to treat patients with advanced disease, who show poor response to the conventional treatment. We report on a successful treatment of a patient with advanced, therapy-refractory multiple myeloma, given very low-dose chemotherapy as induction therapy after optimal purging procedures.
