- Collaborate on a single document - Users can invite friends and co-workers to work on one document and have them go to Type > Add To Project to add their contributions to a single document with the usual image editing tools. From any app in which the users choose to open Photoshop, for example, they can open the Photoshop file and the image editing tools will be at the users' fingertips, and all edits are visible to the other users. A new, direct connection to the Photoshop UI will be used to run the Photoshop UI in app space, so there's no need to rely on Adobe Bridge.
- Collaborate in one document across multiple devices - People can add content to a single document and see it on their phone, tablet, desktop or any other device that can display the document. When someone chooses to close the page, the content will still be open in their device's browser, so users can easily switch between connected devices to continue editing.
- Save edits directly into Photoshop - When people make changes in their browser, they can simply save the changes directly into Photoshop, without switching back and forth, and because their browser edits are now in Photoshop, other users can see the changes.
