Post is for answering questions. As I've said, the last version actually has a. the extracellular environment by translocation to the nucleus to initiate changes that are important to cancer. In breast cancer, several studies have demonstrated an association of lncRNAs to cell migration or invasion, such as HOTAIR and MALAT1. HOTAIR, a lncRNA located on the Xq12 chromosome, has been reported to play an important role in the invasion of breast cancer \[@CR33], \[@CR34]\]. In a study of 278 patients, HOTAIR overexpression and metastasis was observed in 71.8 % of patients. Higher expression of HOTAIR in the primary tumor was correlated with metastasis-free survival and overall survival, and was identified as a novel prognostic biomarker for predicting prognosis in patients with breast cancer \[@CR33]\]. MALAT1 expression was also associated with the metastasis of breast cancer. High MALAT1 expression was significantly associated with increased metastasis and poor survival in patients with breast cancer \[@CR35]\]. These studies are representative of the significant correlation of lncRNAs to cancer metastasis. As a type of lncRNA, eRNA can be found in the cytoplasm and nucleus of cells and have a role in regulating gene expression by interacting with DNA, RNA, or proteins \[@CR36]\]. eRNA can also bind to microRNAs to promote their degradation or block their function \[@CR36]\]. A study showed that eRNA function is associated with several pathways, including cell-cell adhesion, ECM-receptor interaction, focal adhesion, cell adhesion, ECM-receptor interaction, and cell adhesion \[@CR37]\]. The pathogenesis of several malignancies has been demonstrated to correlate with the dysregulation of eRNA, such as breast cancer, lung
