Lets take a closer look at the most significant changes that are now available in ETS2.Q: Is it possible to only deploy to specific collections of the cosmos DB emulator? Let's say I have configured my.NET Core Cosmos DB application's database connection string to "myclientid.documents.windows.net" with an apiKey. And let's say I have configured my.NET Core Cosmos DB application to call my emulator on "myclientid.documents.windows.net/collectionname" with apiKey. I now would like to only deploy my application to specific collections of my emulator. So if I were to deploy only the "one" or "two" collection of the emulator to a testing environment/environment I would like my documents to be stored in those collections. Is this possible? A: Cosmos DB emulators are not only for you to play with or to develop code to work with Cosmos DB, they are also meant to be the place where you deploy your production code. That means that when you perform a code push to the emulator you have to think about how
